(Washington, D.C.) Today, NARHRI is pleased to welcome former North Carolina Attorney General Rufus Edmisten to our team of advocates serving the real estate investing community. Mr. Edmisten will function as NARHRI's Liaison to the State Attorneys General, a position that includes attending state AG-hosted events around the country on behalf of NARHRI, educating AGs about the benefits of the industry, and promoting sound legislative and regulatory policy positions supported by NARHRI. This position now provides NARHRI with a voice before AGs in all 50 states, as NARHRI continues to expand its state legislative lobbying coverage to eventually cover the entire country. NARHRI Executive Director John Grant has issued the following statement:

“Rufus Edmisten has not only served the people of North Carolina with distinction, but is a nationally known and respected figure for his work during the Watergate hearings and his representation of many industries before state attorneys general. Rufus is absolutely the best possible choice to serve NARHRI and its membership in the critical role of Liaison to the State Attorneys General, and we are honored to have him on our team. His participation in events hosted by the National Association of Attorneys General, Democratic Attorneys General Association, Republican Attorneys General Association, and other state AG associations will provide immediate tangible benefits for our members and the industry.

NARHRI has retained and will continue to seek out the very best advocates from premier lobbying and law firms throughout the country in order to provide our members and the real estate investing industry as a whole with the high level of representation that investors deserve. NARHRI believes that true leadership means effective action, and the retention of Rufus along with our agreements with other high-profile and nationally recognized firms, demonstrates this philosophy. I encourage individual investors, real estate speakers, and corporations with an interest in the success of the industry to join NARHRI in its efforts.”
